Introduction to Rope Knotting

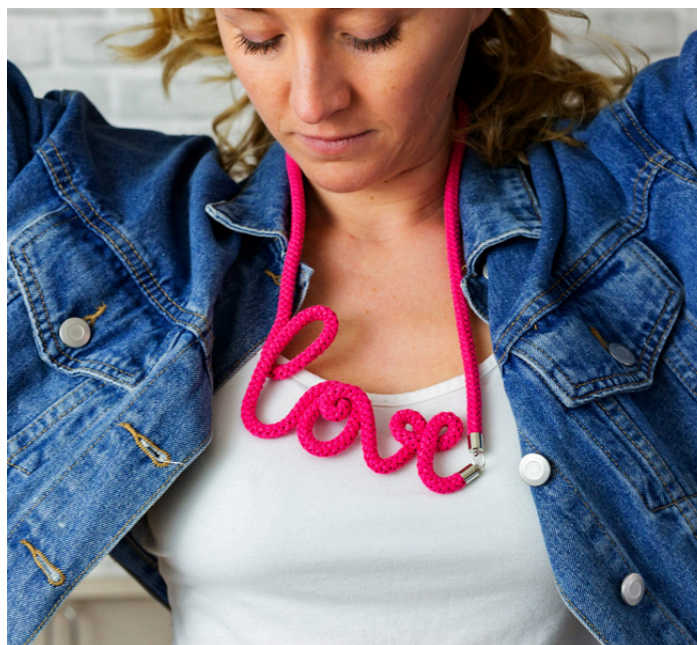

Rope knotting is an ancient craft with deep roots in functional and decorative arts, and in the realm of jewellery and design, it transforms into a bold and expressive technique. For Handmade by Tinni, rope knotting is not just a craft—it's an art form that blends heritage techniques with contemporary style.

The Craft & Its History

Rope knotting has been used for centuries across cultures—sailors' knots, macramé, and intricate textile arts have all relied on the strength and beauty of knots. In jewellery design, these techniques translate into sculptural, wearable art that carries both texture and meaning.

ETHICALLY MADE DESIGNS

HANDMADE TO ORDER

Fundamentally every piece I create is made by hand, without using any machines or electricity (except lighting and heating!), and therefore with minimal impact on the environment.

ORGANIC COTTON

I choose cotton, not only because natural fibres feel like the right choice for my designs, but also because it is sustainable and biodegradable.

ZERO-WASTE DESIGN

One of the most impactful things we can do to reduce our impact is to reduce our waste. My zero-waste collection showcases unique items made from the leftover rope from other designs. By using every scrap of material, it is possible to transform every offcut into a treasure.

PARTNERSHIP WITH ECOLOGI

In March 2025, I completed a 48 months partnership with Ecology and planted 315 trees in Madagascar, Mozambique, Kenya, Nicaragua and Uganda, combined. I am really proud that we have achieved 24 certified tonnes CO2 reduction from my efforts only.

3 years of climate action

Thank you!

I am Paulomi and I'm the founder and artist of the modern textile jewellery & decor brand, Handmade by Tinni. I'm on a mission to empower women to feel confident, look fabulous, and support ethical, local craftsmanship. My passion lies in crafting colourful and fun textile jewellery, including necklaces, earrings, and bracelets that are not just accessories, but expressions of individuality and style.

My creative journey has been deeply influenced by the vibrant and diverse culture of London & India. I draw inspiration from the rich tapestry of these cities, its people, and the kaleidoscope of colours and textures that surround us. Each piece I create is a testament to my commitment to sustainable, ethical practices, as I prioritise using locally sourced materials and handmade to last.

I specialise in the traditional craft of rope knotting and the intricate art of macramé. My designs are a vibrant fusion of time-honoured techniques and contemporary flair, echoing the spirit of individuality.
